Plant Science Bldg, Rm 114 <http://www.isu.edu/webse/exports/isumap/printableISUmap.pdf>

Wes Maynard provides training and development for sign language interpreters. He has been nationally certified for over 11 years and holds CI, CT, and NIC-Master. He has a Master's degree in Business Administration. He currently works full time in the VRS industry and does community interpreting and workshop presentations around the country.

This workshop explores common factors that contribute to the occurrence of ethical dilemmas, reviews relevant literature in the field, and it provides participants opportunities to develop an effective framework for navigating these dilemmas. The workshop is presented in ASL, and targets community and educational interpreters. It is open to all interpreters, as well as ASL and interpreting students. This workshop is at the beginner-to-intermediate level.

Participants will exhibit:

- 1) increased familiarity with current field research and inquiry regarding addressing ethically challenging situations.
- 2) increased confidence in quickly and appropriately responding to situations where ethics are challenged.
- 3) increased capacity to identify, assess, and apply principles the RID Code of Professional Conduct to complicated ethical situations.
- 4) increased familiarity and confidence in incorporating the NIC Interview Examination Rubric Anchors as a framework in addressing ethical dilemmas.
- 5) through guided text analysis and review of the proposed videotext material of ethical dilemmas (see below), an enhanced aptitude in identifying potential stakeholders, short- and long-term outcomes, available resources, cultural, sociological, and political implications.
- 6) increased comfort and confidence in presenting ethical solutions to peers.

In accordance with all federal, state and local laws, events sponsored by Idaho RID are ADA-accessible to all individuals. Please email pdc@idahorid.org for your request.
